THE BEAUTY OF NATURAL MATERIALS IN NON-COMBUSTIBLE MANTELS

Why non-combustible mantels are the “hottest trend in hearth”

SOLUTION. SOLUTION. SOLUTION.

The dream of many homeowners is to have a fireplace and a TV on the same wall. Non-combustible mantels from Lexington Hearth can be placed closer to the fireplace opening to expand the usable area above a mantel while shielding televisions and decorations from excessive heat.

3 THINGS WORTH BRAGGING ABOUT

1 Design.

Our mantels are cast from the real thing, antique wooden beams. We review dozens of beams to get the right look.

2 Lead Times.

Due to our sophisticated manufacturing capabilities, all our mantels ship in a matter of days – not weeks.

3 Detail.

Mantels are hand-cast from each mold using our high-definition Burncrete™, a patented non-combustible casting formulation that authentically replicates the rich texture and character details of antique wood and stone.

BORN IN THE BLUEGRASS

Lexington Hearth mantels are inspired by old-growth timbers and beams salvaged from historic barns, farms, homes, and cabins across Bourbon Country.

Who is Lexington Hearth?

Lexington Hearth is designed and manufactured in Lexington, KY by Everburn Manufacturing, Inc. A mainstay in the Central Kentucky economy, 180 employees keep the 160,000 square foot factory humming.

Everburn is a 30-year-old company, and in that time has perfected its processes for casting and painting non-combustible components for gas hearth appliances, such as fireplaces, fireplace inserts and freestanding stoves. In fact, Everburn is the largest component supplier (often called OEM, or Original Equipment Manufacturer) in the entire hearth industry.

Everburn has invented and patented a proprietary formula for non-combustible mantels, called Burncrete™.

Perfectly IMPERFECT

Part of the charm of Lexington Hearth products are the character marks that provide an authentic look and feel of antique timbers. The patina of time and hand-tooling methods that make these timbers so desirable also produce irregular dimensions that are difficult to accurately measure. So, when we describe a timber, we use nominal measurements that can be larger or smaller than the actual dimensions.

Across the length, depth, and height of the mantel, there may be as much as a half-inch change of measurement on various sections of the mantel. This is not a product defect; it is a beautiful feature that celebrates the unique character of reclaimed timbers. Please keep this in mind when preparing for installation. We recommend that you have our Lexington Hearth product on-site before roughing in the mounting surface.

Kentucky's land is uniquely shaped by limestone — naturally releasing minerals into our soil, helping horses develop stronger bones and bourbon to age gracefully. Our rough chiseled mantel
